

Judi Westberg Warren President

Judi Westberg Warren has over 18 years of experience working with non-profit organizations from California to Washington, DC. She has served as President of Web Wise Kids since 2004. Judi is committed to assisting families and children deal with the new challenges to online safety. This commitment is paired with the strong belief that non-profit organizations need to be on the cutting edge of developing creative and positive solutions to social problems.

Judi's work includes representing WWK to funders, legislators and partners as well as oversight of organizational and program goals. She represents Web Wise Kids at White House Briefings on Children's Issues, Department of Juvenile Justice conferences, and other speaking engagements. Last year she was honored to meet with the Office of the First Lady on the issue of Internet safety. She has testified before a Select Committee of the CA State Senate and the National Committee on Missing and Exploited Children. Judi represented WWK and the United States at an International conference on Internet Safety in Taiwan in 2005. She was nominated for Business Woman of the Year by Bank of America in 2005. She sits on the Congressional Internet Caucus Advisory Committee, The Advertising Council Committee on Internet Safety, The Internet Safety Advisory Board for the Attorney General of Virginia, Cyber Safety Advisory Committee for the state of California and The Internet Safety Foundation of Colorado. She has overseen the expansion of the Web Wise Kids programs which are currently reaching over 4.8 million children nation wide.
